The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sasao (US 2003/0116196) in view of Yoshifumi (JP 05099354). Sasao shows a constant flow valve having a first diaphragm 42 holding a valve member 31 and held at either end by a second 43 and third diaphragm 41. The second and third diaphragms are the same size and separate the valve chamber from first and second pressure chambers 25 and 21. In the first chamber, a spring 76 provides an inward force, and both pressure chambers can also be pressurized with gas. A communication hole (restrictor) 10 connects across the first diaphragm. Yoshifumi (JP 05099354, cited by applicant) shows a constant flow valve that can use a restrictor through the valve housing (Figs. 1 and 4, like Sasao) or in the diaphragm itself (Figs. 2 and 5). It would have been obvious in view of Yoshifumi to move the Sasao restrictor to the diaphragm, because the arrangement is taught to be equivalent by Yoshifumi, and to eliminate the need for extra borings in the Sasao housing.

Claims 3-4 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Nixon shows a similar flow regulator with balanced second and third diaphragms. Mastuzawa shows first, second, and third diaphragms in a flow control valve, but the second and third diaphragms are different sizes. First diaphragm 60 carries an orifice like applicant's orifice 40.
